Munich After-competition Report - 25./26.08.2012

Anna Stöhr and Rustam Gelmanov are the winners of the IFSC Boulder World Cup 2012!

One competition and four winners – that’s the result of the season’s final Boulder WC in Munich yesterday: Akiyo Noguchi and Dmitrii Sharafutdinov celebrated their wins of the day in the Olympiastadion while Anna Stöhr and Rustam Gelmanov clinched their titles as world’s best Boulder athletes 2012.

A big decision of this climbing weekend was already made on Saturday when Austria’s Kilian Fischhuber, who started equal on points with Rustam Gelmanov in this final competition, missed the top ten in his qualification group. No points for Kilian Fischhuber, place 4 in the final for Rustam Gelmanov – so Russia’s two-time winner this season obtained his first Boulder World Cup overall title! The stage victory in Munich goes to another Russian: Reigning world champion Dmitrii Sharafutdinov secured his first win of the season in sight of 8.000 spectators, followed by Sean McColl (CAN) and Jakob Schubert (AUT).

In the women’s overall World Cup the die has already been cast beforehand: Reigning Boulder World Champion Anna Stöhr (AUT) celebrates her third Boulder Overall World Cup win after 2008 and ’11 with place two in Munich. Winner of the day, Akiyo Noguchi from Japan, also fixed her second place in the Boulder Overall World Cup 2012 in absence of Britain's injured Shauna Coxsey. Place three in Munich goes to Germany's local heroine Juliane Wurm.

Anna Stöhr: "It was such a pleasure climbing here in Munich – the audience was just amazing and I think we all enjoyed a worthy conclusion of a great World Cup season! I'm very happy about this title and now I'll travel to Paris with a quite good feeling."

The next season highlight for the world's best Boulderers will be the World Championships in Paris, coming up from September 12th to 16th. Further information and a detailed schedule on <http://www.worldclimbing2012.com>.
